AROUND THE TOWN

Mrs. F. Schooley of Acme, was a visitor in town last week.
Mrs. C. Hiebert was a visitor at Calgary on Tuesday.

B. P. Dick has sold his house on Berlin street to Dr. W. G. Moore the new veterinary surgeon.

Say, have you seen the Pioneer's big offer on the last page? If not, read it.

Harry Gabel of Calgary, is paying a short visit to his mother and friends in Didsbury.

The addition to the fire hall for the accommodation of the new hook and ladder trucks when they arrive, has been completed.

Olds intends installing a waterworks system soon and the C. P. R. are putting in a 20,000 gallon water tank.

Miss Mabel Green arrived on last Friday's train, straight from the "Old Country," and is making her home with friends in Didsbury at present.

Mr. W. J. Hambury of Windsor, N. S., has accepted a position with W. G. Geddes the harness man and expects to make Didsbury his home for the future.

Boys and girls read our ad. on the last page if you want to earn a good watch with very little work.

Rev. E. C. Heaven will leave at the end of the week for Leslieville, west of Red Deer, where he will take up the work of the English Church.

J. H. Conrad, the former manager of the Golden West Hotel left on Tuesday morning for Calgary where he will make his headquarters for the future.

Simon Good, of Carbon, was a visitor in town on Monday. Mr. Good says things are booming at Carbon and that everybody is looking for a good year out there.

Mr. G. Youngs of Embro, Ont. came up unexpectedly from the east on Saturday and paid a short visit to his brother C. Youngs on the blind line. Mr. Youngs left for Stettler on Monday morning to take up his new duties at the Traders Bank in that town, having been transferred from the east.

The prizes offered in the ad. on last page are all genuine and well worth a little work on your part.

B. P. Dick will hold an auction sale of all his horses and other stock and implements and household furniture about June 1st. Ben is going to B. C. for a time but he has been used to the bald-headed prairie for so long that it is thought that he will want to get back to his natural habitat again after a short stay.

Miss Ida Miller, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Miller, was married to Mr. Christopher Hiltz, of Castor, last month. Rev. Johnston, of Olds, conducted the ceremony, which took place at the residence of the bride's parents north of town. The happy couple left for Castor where they will reside.

Mrs. W. G. Moore, wife of Dr. Moore the new veterinary, arrived here from the east on Friday last.

The Buckley
Guarantee ensures Satisfaction
—or a new hat free.

A hat needs a guarantee. More easily than any other article of apparel, a hat can deceive its purchaser—look right without being right. Clothes, or shoes, or ties, you can "size up"—a hat, you can not.

For instance, almost everyone knows enough about tweeds to tell whether a suit will wear well.

With hats it is different. With a "new hat" a buyer can wear three months or more, and after one month he will find it is not what he expected.

Few can tell a hat's real worth without knowing what goes into its making. None can tell exactly but the manufacturer.

He knows better than anyone how long his product will wear—and, if he believes in his hats he ought to be willing to guarantee them.

Buckley Hats are guaranteed. The men that make them believe they'll wear longer than any other hat that's made—and in proof of that belief the makers attach their guarantee for four months. If you buy a Buckley hat today, and any time within the next four months you find your hat losing color or showing signs of wear, and he will cheerfully exchange it for a new one. No questions asked. No return of money. No return of the old hat. The Buckley guarantee is absolute. It is the only guarantee of its kind in the world. It is the only guarantee that is backed by a $500,000.00 fund. It is the only guarantee that is backed by a $500,000.00 fund.

Prices made, and of highest grade hats, to suit all climates, types and to conform to latest fashion tendencies. The price is only $24.00.

PUBLISHED AT DIDSBURY, AT

SUBSCRIPTION: One Dollar per year in advance. All arrearages of six months or more will be at the rate of $1.50 per year. Advertising Rates quoted on application.

H. E. OSBORN, EDITOR.

In last week's report of the Council meeting a motion was made that the Council call a meeting of the taxpayers to discuss the installation of water-works, sewage and electric light systems, but at that time there was no date set for such meeting. If this is carried out according to program it is all right and the Council will not be the losers as it will then be up to the ratepayers to decide at the polls their wishes in the matter intelligently, and the Council will have done their whole duty. It is to be hoped, however, that they will also have the engineer they have engaged to give them estimates and figures present, so that a full explanation can be given. Another thing that should be done is to advertise the date of the meeting well so that there will be no kick coming in this respect as there has been at other times. If the meeting is not well advertised and a good representative gathering of the ratepayers present to thoroughly understand the different propositions to be put before them, the fate of the by-laws which will have to be put before they are ready to come to a decision so far there has been little information given in the reports of the Council meetings.

Spring the belated, or as it has more aptly been termed the "phantom of the seasons," has at length come and asserted the earth from the letters with which the ground before winter had found it. With the coming of the vernal season, the dominant note is that of optimism. The pessimism which one associates with Winter's chilly blasts and grey skies, fades like a dream before the warmth and life giving rays of the Spring sun.

Spring with its golden key has unlocked the treasure-house door of activity and energy, and the forces of work are everywhere in evidence. The bird-world is busy in the field from morning till evening, sewing in anticipation of the harvest yet to be. Human weakness and impatience show at their greatest at this season of the year, and man of necessity becomes a creature of faith. He has ploughed, disked, sown and possibly reaped his land, and now in his extreme helplessness, nature comes to his aid and sets the law of growth in operation.

In this age of human achievement when science is unfolding so many of her secrets to mankind, we are so aptly tempted to forget that there are any limitations at all in the world of progress. Nature, however, is not to be dictated by man, and therefore in the law of growth, the farmer, like the scientist, is held in subjection to her ruling.

It does seem to us as though we have every reason to be optimistic this Spring, and we do not need to wear rose-colored spectacles either to take a bright view of things. The abundant snow fall of the past few months has removed the dread of another dry year, and it is with some measure of rejoicing that we can look forward with confidence to the future. Reports from other districts indicate that farming prospects in the Prairie Provinces are particularly good. This western country is distinctly agricultural; its development therefore depends upon the yield of the tilled soil. Thus farming is the foundation rock upon which Commerce builds its huge edifices. Let the spirit of a sane optimism take possession of us, and by doing our best in justice to ourselves and our fellowmen, the battle against discontent and worry will be easily won.

THE FOUR FINGERS

By FRED M. WHITE,

Author of

The Grimsm Blind; The Cardinal Math; The Weight of the Green; The Corner House; The Slaves of Silence; Draven Fortune; The Fatal Debt; Netta.

"We are getting on," Venner whispered. "It may surprise you to hear this, but I have expected it for some little time. The so-called absent owner of these houses is the man sitting opposite Fenwick there. Now, do you see something like daylight before you? I wouldn't have missed this for worlds."

"We have certainly been lucky," Gurdun replied.

There was no time for any further conversation, for the cripple was speaking again. "He was cold and hard and there was not the slightest trace of fear in his manner. So you have found that out, he said. "You know that the man was of the unfortunate Frenchman who was murdered by a racially Dutchman. He discovered that once having discovered the secret of the mine you could work it to your own advantage. How well you worked it to your advantage your left hand testifies."

The jerk went home to Fenwick, his grey yellow face flushed, and he half rose from his chair with a threatening gesture.

"Oh, you can strike," the cripple said. "I am practically helpless as far as my lower limbs are concerned and I know that you will not be so easily set that would gratify a little soul like yours. It hurts me to sit here, helpless, and to know that you are the cause of all my misfortunes; knowing that, but for you, I should be as straight and strong as the best of them, and yet you are not safe—you are going to pay the penalty of your crime. Have you had the first of your warning yet?"

Fenwick started in his seat; in the looking glass the watchers could see how ghastly his face had grown.

"I don't know what you mean," he muttered.

"Listen," the cripple cried. "Patry! Why, you are shaking from head to foot now, and you are the shadow of a man who stands in the shadow of the gallows."

"I repeat, I don't know what you mean," Fenwick said.

"Oh, yes, you do. When your accomplice Van For, foolishly murdered my father, you thought that the two of you would have the mine to yourselves; you thought you would not be alone as my father and I, and you thought you would gain back to England. That is how the murdered man accomplished it, that is how he made his fortune—and you were going to do the same thing, both of you. When you had all your arrangements made, you went down to the coast on certain business, leaving the racially Dutchman behind. He was waiting in the mine. There was no one within miles of that secret spot, and yet he vanished. He was never heard of again. The message of his fingers was conveyed to his wife, for she was implicated in the crime, and my father, and how she suffered you already know. But you are a brave man—I give you that. You were sent back to the mine again, Fenwick, and you were determined to be deterred by what had happened. What if you were never deterred not go into. Shall I tell the story, or will you be content with a recollection of your sufferings? It is all the same to me."

"You are a bold man," Fenwick cried. He was trembling with the rage that filled him. "You are a bold man to defy me like this. Nobody knows that I am here, nobody knows that you are in your own house again. I could kill you as you sit there, and not a soul would suffer for the crime."

The cripple laughed aloud, he seemed to be amused at something.

"Really?" he sneered. "Such cheap talk is wasted upon me. Be sure, however, that you will gain by my unexpected crime, and how much better off would you be? You know as well as I do, disguise it as you will, that the long arm has reached for you across five thousand miles of sea, and that, when the time comes, you will be stricken down here in London as surely and inevitably as if you had remained in Mexico under the shadow of the mountains. The dreadful secret is known, and it is only thirty it is even unknown to me. For over three centuries the natives of Mexico, worked the mines. Mine only two of the tribe who knew its secret remained. Then it was that my father came and made this mine his, and an adventurer to his finger tips. Moreover, he was a doctor. His healing art made him the envy of his friends, and when their time came, my father was left in possession of the mine. He was a man who was guarded and how the spirit of the place took its vengeance upon intruders, you know too well. Ah, I have touched you now."

Fenwick had risen and was pacing uneasily up and down the room. All the dark-devil spirit seemed to have left the man for the moment. He turned a troubled face on the cripple huddled in his chair. He seemed half inclined to temper, and then, with a short laugh, he resumed his own seat again.

"You seem to be very sure of your ground," he sneered.

"Oh, I am," the cripple went on. "What does it matter what becomes of a melancholy wreck like myself? Doctors tell me that in time I may become my old self again, but I doubt it. As sure as I sit here, my injuries are due to you. I might have had you shot before this but I spared you. It would have been a kindness to enter your life short, but I had another use for you, thus that. And now, gradually, but surely, the net is closing in around you, though you cannot yet see it. You are not so powerful as you seem to prevent the inevitable end."

"You seem to have settled it all to your own satisfaction," Fenwick replied, "but you forget that I may have something to say in the matter. When I discovered that you were in London, I laid my plans for getting you into my hands. I am in a position now to dictate terms, and I have nothing to do but listen. I am prepared to spare your life on one condition."

"Now, kindly follow me carefully."

"I am listening," the cripple said. "If you were not here, I should feel as if I were in a world that there could be no condition between us; but go on, let me hear what you have to say."

"I am coming to that. I want you to tell me where I can find Felix."

"Suddenly, without the slightest premonition, the cripple burst into a hearty laugh, rocking his body forward in a perfect ecstasy of enjoyment."

"That is what you are driving at," he said. "So you think that if you could get Felix Zary out of the mine, you would be absolutely safe."

"Really, it is marvelous how an otherwise clever man can be so blind to the obvious facts of the case. I will give you Zary's address. Fenwick was obviously puzzled. Perhaps it was beginning to dawn upon him that he had a man of more ordinary intellect to grapple with. He looked searchingly at the cripple, who was leaning back now with eyes half closed.

"I can understand you," he muttered. "I am in imminent danger of my life, though I should be able to get out of it."

"And you are quite capable of putting me in the same position," he said. "Is it not so, my friend?"

"Yes, I could, and I would," Fenwick said. "I would be a man of my word."

"I could go to bed at night feeling easy, I should like to make my bed. Nothing could trouble me then. As for that accused mine, I have said with it. Now again do I plant my foot in Mexico."

"Fool that you are," the cripple said in tones of infinite pity. "So you think that if Zary and myself were out of the way you might die eventually in your bed honored and respected by your countrymen. The vengeance is upon you, it is following you here, it is close at hand now. You have already had my warning. Perhaps you may have had your second warning; that you had some good advice. You have had enough a few minutes ago. I am quite sure a little reflection will show you that you are in a very dangerous position. You are a prisoner in your own home. Of course I know I am entirely in your hands. I will be very glad to leave, because I have important business on hand."

"I know your important business," Fenwick sneered. "Everything that goes in your favor will naturally spell your ruin."

disaster to me. As I told you before it was only an accident that told me where you were; indeed, so changed are you that I should not have recognized you if I had met you in the street. No, on the whole, you will stay where you are."

At this point Venner clenched Gurdun's arm and dragged him hurriedly across the landing down to the half staircase. So quickly was this done that Gurdun had no time to ask the reason for it all.

"Someone coming down the stairs," Venner whispered. "Didn't you hear a voice? I believe it is the white lady again."

Surely enough, looking upwards, they could see the slim white figure creeping down the stairs. The girl was crouching some little song to herself as she came along. She turned into the drawing-room and called aloud to the cripple in the chair.

With an oath on his lips, Fenwick motioned her away.

CHAPTER XIV

Master of the Situation.

"What have you come back here for?" Fenwick demanded. "You said you were going to stay here, and now you are going to bed long ago."

The girl looked dramatically about her; it was as though she were about to appear to appreciate the significance of Fenwick's question. She was more than once about to speak, but she was a human being in the full possession of understanding.

"I don't know," she said helplessly. She rubbed her eyes as if there had been a mist before them. "I was so tired that I fell fast asleep. Then I had a dream. I dreamt that all the miserable past was forgiven, and that Charles was with me once more. Then he seemed to call me, and I woke up. Oh, it was such a vivid dream that I have been thinking of it ever since."

I was so restless and anxious that I made up my mind to come down again. I was passing a door just now, it opened, and the face of Charles looked out. It was only for a moment, then the door closed behind him. I dragged him back and the door was closed once more."

A foolish fancy," Fenwick growled.

"It was not," the girl cried almost passionately. "I tried the door a moment later, and it was locked. I tell you that Charles was in that room. I went in to bed again, and I know the truth. Oh, why do you keep me in suspense like this?"

"I am not," the girl muttered. "Mad as a March hare. Why don't you send her to an asylum?"

"I am not," the girl said. "I am in a curious hard case. Something tells me that she has made a discovery. I am not sure, but it is possible that you have Charles Evans under this roof."

The girl laughed, but there was something uneasy and strained about his mirth. He glanced defiantly at the cripple, then his eyes dropped before the latter's steady gaze.

"Why should I worry about Evans?" he asked. "The man is nothing to me. He is a tramp, and he is a tramp."

The rest of Fenwick's sentence was drowned in a sudden uproar when the girl, who was passing a door just now, it opened, and the face of Charles looked out. It was only for a moment, then the door closed behind him. I dragged him back and the door was closed once more."

"I am not," the girl muttered. "Mad as a March hare. Why don't you send her to an asylum?"

"I am not," the girl said. "I am in a curious hard case. Something tells me that she has made a discovery. I am not sure, but it is possible that you have Charles Evans under this roof."

The girl laughed, but there was something uneasy and strained about his mirth. He glanced defiantly at the cripple, then his eyes dropped before the latter's steady gaze.

"Why should I worry about Evans?" he asked. "The man is nothing to me. He is a tramp, and he is a tramp."

The rest of Fenwick's sentence was drowned in a sudden uproar when the girl, who was passing a door just now, it opened, and the face of Charles looked out. It was only for a moment, then the door closed behind him. I dragged him back and the door was closed once more."

A foolish fancy," Fenwick growled.

"It was not," the girl cried almost passionately. "I tried the door a moment later, and it was locked. I tell you that Charles was in that room. I went in to bed again, and I know the truth. Oh, why do you keep me in suspense like this?"

Comfort for skin troubles and rest for tired, fretted mothers.

Is your little one a sufferer from itching, burning eczema or other torturing, disfiguring skin eruption? Are you, yourself, worn out by long, sleepless nights and ceaseless anxiety? And have you tried treatment after treatment without avail? Then read in these remarkable letters proof of what Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have done, throughout the world, for just such cases as yours.

Canada

When my boy was about three months old, the head broke out with a rash which was very sore and ran a watery discharge. We tried everything we could but he would not be cured. I then tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he was cured. I have since used it for all my children's skin troubles and it has always cured them. I have since used it for all my children's skin troubles and it has always cured them.

England

It was the Genievick lecture which recommended us to try Cuticura. We got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the first bath gave her great relief. From that time she was able to sleep and eat and fall off in little while. Baby was always very sore when she was born and we started with Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then she began to rest. We used to wake all night with her, and nothing did her any good but since using Cuticura Remedies we can rest all night. We used only two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Cuticura Soap, and they cured her completely of her eczema. (Signed) Mrs. J. W. Dwyer, The Grange, Aldwick, Sussex, Eng.

Australia

The trouble that afflicted my little girl started in her head. She was a little over a year old. She was very restless and would not sleep. I tried everything I could but she would not be cured. I then tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and she was cured. I have since used it for all my children's skin troubles and it has always cured them.

Scotland

When our little boy Andrew was four months old, little red spots came on his face and neck. They were very sore and he would not sleep. I tried everything I could but he would not be cured. I then tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he was cured. I have since used it for all my children's skin troubles and it has always cured them.

United States

I have a little baby almost a year old. When it was two months old it got eczema on its face and neck. It was very sore and he would not sleep. I tried everything I could but he would not be cured. I then tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he was cured. I have since used it for all my children's skin troubles and it has always cured them.

Trial Treatment Free

That all may try without expense the treatment which, for more than a generation, has maintained its position as the best and simplest remedy for all skin and scalp troubles, we have prepared a free trial of Cuticura Ointment with 2-2.5 lb. tins of Cuticura Soap and 2-2.5 lb. cakes of Cuticura Soap. This trial is strictly limited to one trial only. It is not to be used for more than one trial. It is not to be used for more than one trial.

Get a Copy

The Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, has issued the second edition of "Land and Agriculture in Alberta," a copy of which has been received by this office. This book is gotten up by the Publicity Bureau of the department and it not only contains some excellent half-tone engravings of different scenes in Alberta, but the contents are both instructive and fully up to date. The book is printed on a fine grade paper and is well worth reading, and we have no doubt but that it will be a big factor in the publicity campaign of the Province. You should get a copy.

Penhold Celebrates

Penhold was the scene of a brilliant gathering on Wednesday night last, when a banquet and reception was tendered Mr. C. L. Trueman, manager of the Standard Bank recently established there. The banquet was given in the Imperial Hotel which Harry Metcalf, who is well known in Didsbury and all through the district, recently purchased.

There were about seventy guests present and they were welcomed in their prize in the way everything was conducted by Mr. and the Misses Metcalf. The tables were elegantly decorated and were loaded with choice viands and wines. A long list of toasts were responded to, which included "Our guests" by C. L. Trueman; "Our guests from neighboring towns" by Messrs. G. W. West and W. Wilson of Innisfail and others which ended up with one to "Our host" which was of course responded to by the genial Harry.

Mr. Metcalf has made quite a change in the hotel, with the assistance of his daughters, and those who say there say that Penhold has reaped the benefit in the excellent way in which the hotel is conducted.

For soreness of muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, Chamberlain's Liniment is excellent. This liniment is also highly esteemed for the relief it affords in cases of rheumatism. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Crop Prospects

Optimism over the crop prospects for this season is again supreme in this district, and although the Didsbury district is essentially a mixed farming country, very little of course has some kind of grain sown. It is now estimated that over seventy-five per cent of the seeding has been completed and with the storm of Saturday last and the fine warm rains which this district has received in the last few weeks, prospects were never better for a bumper harvest.

The fall wheat stand is looking fine, and as there was a fairly heavy fall of snow this winter at the time of the frost, it was well protected, and should give a good general yield. Taken altogether, the optimists appear to be right this year in their prognostications.

Morin Notes

It is just as well that the name of Blooming Prairie is changed to Morin for there are so many fences being put up that the country does not look natural any more.

Mr. Deering is in Calgary buying a new stock of goods.

Mr. Glen Olson left for Minnesota on account of the serious illness of his father. He will not come back until October.

Munson, (Fox Coulee), is still progressing. By fall it should compare with Didsbury of two years ago.

Mr. J. Ankers departed for Marleod last week.

Trains are running regularly again.

Miss Mary Gordon is keeping house for her brother George this summer.

Mr. Alec Gorden starts next Monday for the R. R.

Miss Cleminie Young, of Ghost Pine, is helping Mrs. LaRoy with the restaurant, post office, etc.

It is said that Mr. John Lucas lost a twenty-five dollar lap robe on the night of the dance, others say the only robe he possessed was one made out of sugar sacks.

Mr. LaRoy bought out the firm of Carter & Kirby, stock of goods, bedding, coal, etc.

Miss Ada Rober, from Twp. 30, R. 19, is joining Mrs. Deering with her horse work and to care for the boy from last month.

The R. R. crossing signs were put up this week by our friend Alec, the section foreman. He will make this siding his headquarters for some time. The new blacksmith shop will open soon.

It is reported that a man and a six horse team were drowned in the Red Deer River at Tolman. The particulars were not stated.

"Did you cast your vote, Auntie?" "Oh, yes! Isn't it grand? A real nice gentleman with a beautiful mustache and yellow spots marked my ballot for me. I know I should have marked it myself, but it seemed to please him greatly." —Life.

Federal Parliament Will Adjourn

OTTAWA, May 5th.—The Liberals in caucus this morning, decided that after disposing of the general business before the house, an adjournment will be taken for a couple of months. An effort will be made to adjourn on or before May 23rd and to resume business on July 1st, which would mean an adjournment of nearly two months.

It is expected that on May 23rd the sessional program, apart from the reciprocity agreement and a portion of supply, will be put through. In the case of items not voted in the interim supply bill sufficient to cover a period of several months will be voted. The opposition, it is said, will undoubtedly agree to this arrangement.

A great many of the members on both sides of the house would have preferred adjournment and an extra session in July, because of the expense to which they will be put by being compelled to return to Ottawa in July.

An agreement between the parties was reached this morning, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the announcement at the Liberal caucus. There was a vigorous kick from the fighting wing, but the premier mollified them by stating that there would be no let up on the reciprocity issue.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

Tell Us How You Did It

You may win a prize by doing so

SUPPOSE your friend Bob Wilson, on the next concession, asked about that silo or barn foundation you built. You would be glad to tell him, wouldn't you? And it wouldn't take you long, either, would it? And, as a matter of fact, you'd find as much pleasure telling him as he would in listening— Isn't that right?

First you would take him over to view the silo or barn foundation. Then you would start to describe its dimensions—the kind of aggregate used—the proportions of cement used—number of men employed—number of hours' working time required—method of mixing—kind of forms used—method of reinforcing, if any—and finally, what the job cost. So that by the time you finished, neighbor Wilson would have a pretty accurate idea of how to go about building the particular piece of work which you described.

Now couldn't you do the same for us, with this difference—that you stand a good chance of getting well paid for your time? In Prize "D" of our contest, open to the farmers of Canada, we offer $100.00 to the farmer in each Province who will furnish us with the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of concrete work shown by photograph sent in was done. The size of the work described makes no difference. The only important thing to remember is that the work must be done in 1911 and "CANADA" Cement used.

In writing your description, don't be too particular about grammar or spelling or punctuation. Leave that to literary folk. Tell it to us as you would tell it to your neighbor. What we want are the facts, plainly and clearly told.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? And it is simple. And surely it is well worth your while when you think of the reward in view.

Now sit right down, take your pen or pencil—fill out the attached coupon—or a post-card if it's handier—and write for the circular which fully describes the conditions of this, the first contest of the kind ever held in Canada.

Every dealer who handles "CANADA" Cement will also be given a supply of these circulars—and you can get one from the dealer in your town. If that seems more convenient than writing for it.

Contest will close on November 15th, 1911—all photos and descriptions must be sent in by that date, to be eligible for one of these prizes. Awards will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The decisions will be made by a disinterested committee, the following gentlemen having consented to act for us, as the jury of award: Prof. Peter Gillespie, Lecturer in Theory of Construction, University of Toronto; Prof. W. H. Day, Professor of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; and Ivan S. Macdonald, Editor of "Construction."

Having decided to compete for one of the prizes, your first step should be to get all the information you can on the subject of Concrete Construction on the Farm. Fortunately, most of the pointers that anyone can possibly need, are contained in our wonderfully complete book, entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." A large number of Canadian farmers have already sent for and obtained copies of this free book. Have you got your copy yet? If not, you'd better send for one to-day. Whether you are a contestant for one of our prizes or not, you really ought to have this book in your library. For it contains a vast amount of information and hints that are invaluable to the farmer.

Please send full particulars and book.

New Brush Cutter

A new power brush cutting machine has just been tried out in the brush land southeast of town by Mr. James E. Weiler, which promises to revolutionize the brush cutting difficulties which some of the farmers of this western country have to contend with.

The cutter is connected up with a 2 1/2 h.p. gasoline engine by heavy brans braced under the engine which pushes the cutter through all obstacles in its way. The cutter itself is an equilateral triangle, and has a twelve foot cutting knife on each side with 10 inch blades, and is so constructed that while it is attached to the engine solidly it is still limber enough to follow all inequalities of the earth independently of the engine. The saving of labor and time is fully demonstrated when it is stated that this machine saves the use of sixteen horses and eleven men under the old system of cutting brush with the horse power cutters as it will do the work of four of these machines and will cut trees 3 1/2 inches thick as though they were twigs. It is figured that twenty acres a day can be cut easily with this machine.

A trial demonstration was given on Monday to a large number of business men who were all loud in their praise of the work done by the machine, and who congratulated Mr. M. Weiler on his ingenuity in constructing it.

Those who have brush to cut on their farms should make it a point to see this machine at work and see how easily it is done, although we understand that Mr. Weiler is going to clear off all his own land first.

NOTICE Census Enumerators

A meeting of the Census Enumerators of the Didsbury District will be held in Hainstock's hall, Oids on Monday afternoon and Tuesday next, May 15th, and 16th, all the enumerators for this district are requested to be present. F.—W. Galtbraith.

and caboose being backed into a hand car that was being used by the section gang, the car getting mixed up with the wheels of the caboose and turning it around, which caused the mix-up with the engine. No one was hurt. The first clock north passenger train and the 8.20 south did not go through until late at night. The wrecking crew came up from Calgary with their outfit and built a track around the wreck to allow the passengers to get through.

First Game May 19

A very successful meeting of baseball delegates from Bowden, Oids, Didsbury and Crossfield was held at Oids on Tuesday when a league including the four towns mentioned was formed. We did not receive a report of the meeting in time for full publication this week, but we will publish it next week with the schedule.

The first league game at Didsbury takes place on Friday, May 19th, and it is expected that it will be a good one so remember the date, May 19th.

BUSINESS LOCALS

A BIG OFFER

To Men, Women, and Children. We have decided to make a change in our System of obtaining New Subscribers to the

Didsbury Pioneer

for the next six weeks. Instead of paying canvassers to go over the district we will divide up the money this would cost us into to be competed for by the public. The prizes given will be as follows:

The gentleman sending in the largest number of new or renewal subscriptions to the Didsbury Pioneer, a suit of Semi-Ready Clothes from J. V. Berscht, valued at $20.

The lady sending in the largest number of new or renewal subscriptions, a handsome oak Ladies Rocking chair. Can be seen at the Didsbury furniture store.

The boy under 18 years sending in the largest number of new or renewal subscriptions, a 7 jeweled silver or oxidized silver watch.

The girl under 18 years sending in the largest number of new or renewal subscriptions, a 7 jeweled silver or oxidized silver watch.

Note—These watches are guaranteed both as timekeepers and in the case, and can be seen at J. Nixon's jewelry store.

Read the Conditions

The conditions under which this competition is being held are very simple viz: Any lady, gentleman boy or girl is eligible for this competition.

The subscription price to the Didsbury Pioneer is $1 per year, mailed to any address in Canada or England. To points in the United States the price is $1.50 per year.

Any person paying in a subscription to this office may, if they wish, state who they desire to receive credit for same.

In order that each subscriber may receive the Pioneer as soon as possible it is desired that each party soliciting subscriptions bring or send in the names (with the money) they have secured to this office on Monday of each week. A list of the names of each party sending in subscriptions at this office will be kept so that credit will be given to them at the end of the contest.

This contest is open to all and we play no favorites.

Those who fail to get any of the prizes mentioned will get 15 cents on all subscriptions sent in at the end of the contest.

Each party sending in subscriptions must state which premiums they are working for.
